Gas or electric ovens We fix them all! Gas and electric ovens from each manufacturer. From installation services to repairs, no work is too big or too small for us. What's the difference? Gas furnaces require a gas connection to work. If your home or business does not have a gas connection (or gas lines) installed that this is an extra cost you will have to consider. Gas furnaces tend to have a higher higher purchase cost, but users usually enjoy savings over reduced energy costs. We have experienced many more problems related to unequal cooking (hot points) within gas ovens. The gas heating elements arrive at the temperature very quickly making a gas oven the option for many professional kitchens. Electricity The furnaces work using heating elements that are fed by the regular electrical outlets of your home. Electric furnaces tend to be cheaper to buy, but run at a higher global cost. Electric fees in Vancouver, and all BCs are only rising. Electric furnaces are easier to maintain, clean and achieve more uniform cooking temperatures. Conventional or convectional properties We repair conventional and convection ovens. From travel fuses to elementsand fans our professional technicians have experience in the repair of conventional furnaces and convection. What's the difference? Conventional furnaces do not have internal fans. They use heating elements to bring the oven to its correct cooking temperature. A convection furnace (also called "fan-forced" furnaces) has fans. The fans are are to circulate the air. The flow of air inside a convection oven helps cook food faster and evenly. Ovens Maintenance Ovens Keep your kitchen appliances in order by ordering regular maintenance appointments. Our friendly service technicians will make scheduled visits to fix and ensure that your device is always working at maximum performance. From the calibration of the thermostat to the door seals, we make the maintenance of the oven quick and easy. Call us today to discuss how our kiln maintenance programs can be the perfect fit for your home or business needs. We repair Kenmore Elite grills in your area.
